

The Nodes of the Aerospace Ecosystem at the Farnborough International Airshow 2026

By Sandro Villanes Rojas, ASIM Founder & CEO

Farnborough, July 20–24, 2026 (ASIM). During the week of FIA26 and marking 10 years since the publication of "International Airshows and World Aviation — ASPJ 2016" (a pledge for updating), the supply-and-demand dynamics of the aerospace sector were confirmed firsthand on the ground under the banner: "the 46th edition FIA: the Apex of Aviation and Global Platform where aerospace, defence and space come together to shape the future"— aptly expressed by Gareth Rogers, CEO of Farnborough International.

Farnborough International Airshow 2026 represents the ideal nexus for the aerospace ecosystem to converge. From an organizational perspective, FIA26 attracted other key nodes hosting similar global events. ASIM was able to verify and engage directly with several of these entities (ASIM maintains partnerships and credentials across many of them). Participating nodes included the Paris Airshow 2027, Singapore Airshow 2028, Dubai Airshow 2027, El Alamein International Airshow 2026, FAMEX 2027, FIDAE 2028, LIMA 2027, AVALON 2027, Seoul ADEX 2027, and the Japan International Aerospace Exhibition 2028. However, additional nodes comprising the global aerospace ecosystem were not in attendance at FIA26, all of which ASIM incorporates into its overarching conceptual framework: the "Route of Air&Spaceshow International."

Furthermore, without exception, the true protagonists animating the Farnborough International Airshow 2026 were the individuals and corporate entities assembled as global leaders, innovators, governments, investors, primes, SMEs, emerging technology companies, exhibitors (the core engine of FIA26 and the aerospace ecosystem), partners, sponsors, suppliers, delegations, and key stakeholders. Likewise, the air and static displays stood as a testament to the excellence of this airshow.

Special recognition is due to the Farnborough International team for delivering once again a top-tier airshow and allowing us to fully experience the Farnborough International Airshow 2026 from July 20–24, 2026. We look forward to the next iteration in 2028.
